

Supporting Renewable Energy Projects During Tough Times

As we move through this uncharted territory, it's time for all of us to 'lean in, step up and lead' through these challenging times. The safety and wellbeing of people must remain the highest priority and our values of "Family First, Lead the Way and Think Sustainably" have never been more important than today.

At HSE Global, we remain committed to supporting our people and our clients by ensuring we are doing everything in our control to reduce the impact of COVID-19 and ensuring that the focus is kept on safety and wellbeing.

The services division of HSE Global have been amazing through this crisis in how they are stepping up and supporting our renewable energy partners in delivering safe, reliable windfarm projects across Australia and New Zealand, projects which if stopped, would have an impact on delivering long term sustainable solutions for our future.

To date we have supported over 10 projects in Australia and New Zealand with onsite HSE services from audit and assurance to onsite coaching and project management.

The expertise of our dedicated services division traverses multiple industries and skill sets, so we have the capability to support organisations throughout this testing time.

If your organisation needs any support, including COVID-19 response planning and management as well as Health, Safety or Environment contract resources during these uncertain times contact us at www.hseglobal.com.au.
